

ORE-BASED METALLICS – SHORT COURSE

Friday 11th November 2016 | Steel Institute VDEh | Düsseldorf | Germany

ABOUT THE PROGRAM:

Ore-based metallics (pig iron, cold DRI and hot briquetted iron- HBI) are continuing to gain popularity in steelmaking operations throughout the world.

The International Iron Metallics Association \(IIMA\) in association with VDEh is bringing together industry experts from around the world for one day to lead a short course on the use and benefits of ore based metallics. The course will cover topics including: production, usage of products in EAF and Integrated steel mills and the value in use of ore based metallics.

The event will also include a panel discussion and question and answer session featuring industry producers and experts.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND?

All industry professionals who wish to gain an understanding of usage, purchasing and handling of OBMs as it applies to steel mill usage, raw material supply and purchasing. Anyone who has responsibility for the above should attend, including: plant managers; technical engineers, operators and management; design and cost engineers; third-party mill groups; suppliers and customers.

Whether you're taking the first steps in your career or at the top of the profession, our 2016 Ore Based Metallics half day course will provide you a broad introduction to the complexities of today's OBMs to ensure you have the proficiencies needed to stay current with the growing OBM industry.
